

A Winding Road To The Land Of Enchantment

A memoir. Born in the smallest town in Idaho -- aptly named Small, Idaho -- in 1919, the author grew up on a ranch during the Great Depression. To supplement their income, his family managed Lidy Hot Springs, a stage stop on the Dubois/Gilmore line and a famous resort with hot baths, swimming pool, bar, and dance hall. His rural school went only to the 10th grade, so his Mother took his brother and him to California to finish High School and attend Junior College. While at Junior College, he played baseball and tennis with Jackie Robinson, who lived a few blocks away. Returning to Idaho, he graduated from the University of Idaho just in time to volunteer for Navy service following Pearl Harbor. After training, he was assigned as a pilot to Torpedo Squadron VT-4 and served in both the Atlantic and Pacific. Following WWII he earned a Ph.D in Range Management, and after stints as Professor at Texas A&M University and Dean of Agriculture at Texas Tech University, became president of New Mexico State University.
