

Excerpt from The Works of Tobias Smollett, M. D. With Memoirs of His Life, Vol. 4 of 8: To Which Is Prefixed a View of the Commencement and Progress of Romance My Lord, The turn which your lordship gave to the conversation of last night having laid me under the necessity of vindicating the step I have lately taken in publishing Memoirs of my life, I think I have a right to demand your opinion of the motives which I then explained; and this I ask by way of appeal to your judgment from the sentiments of those who might perhaps think my inducements were weak or frivolous. For, though no person in the company attempted to invalidate the arguments I advanced, I could perceive that one gentleman was not altogether convinced of the rectitude of that measure. You may remember he dropped several dissenting hints, couched in the modest expressions of, with submission to your ladyships better judgment But to be sure, you would not have taken such a step without first weighing the consequences.
