Not illustrated. 1904 edition. Excerpt: ...gathered from all quarters of the globe; beautiful paintings and statuary are there; and shut in behind glass cases, protected from the ravages of time, are studies for the, antiquarian and the archeologist, from all parts of the world. All that meets the eye in the different corners is so arranged as to instruct and serve. Here, in this spacious place, are entertained on rare occasions, National Representatives, people coming from all parts of the world, seeking further knowledge of the educational system of the Universal Brotherhood. Moving on, we go up a broad stairway, that leads to the private office of the International work, which is one of the Departments of the Universal Brotherhood Organization. It is difficult to convey a correct idea of this interesting place, for the whole upper floor is one great office, the wide windows opening out to the north, south, east and west, and charming nooks and corners are there: everything bears the stamp of intense effort, as well as of sim A LOMA-LAND ART DOOR Universal Brotherhood, working to advance the interests of that great body for the people of the Earth. In a large corner of this place, facing the east, is where Katherine Tingley carries on her private correspondence, and her work for the children; in another corner, facing the south, is the International Representative, G. de Purucker, who acts as Mrs. Tingleys Private Secretary. At a big desk, hidden in the west corner, buried in a pile of papers, is the working place of H. Patterson, one of the old workers of the Theosophical Society. Other workers go and come from this office, as their duties call, among them S. A. Charpiot, who has his special place, as an assistant in the translation of official
