

Real Riders Never Die

When Taryn-Lee Alvarez, is propelled out of her current foster home, what is she to do? Shes underage and homeless. Submerged in her deplorable circumstances shes determined to make a way for herself. She suffers one hardship after another as she tries to find her way in the world. A couple of days shy of her eighteenth birthday she stumbles upon Demoto Youngblood. Demoto is a young African businessman. Diligent and dedicated to his craft, he makes a life for himself in the small town of Columbus GA. The two are both in their last year of school, and are preparing for graduation. Taryn-Lee is a seventeen year old orphan, whose fallen madly in love with a benevolent and tenacious man. Shes the only daughter of deceased parents Erin, and Terrence-Lee Alvarez. After her parents were killed in a car accident she was thrust head first into the system. Demoto was busy leading a normal life with his girlfriend Alicia, until he saw Taryn. Upon meeting her, they formed an unwavering bond. Although the two are unfamiliar with one another, their worlds arent very different. Demoto appears to lead a stable life, but everything isnt always what it seems. Taryn on the other hand, wears her problems out in the open. Unable to hide the feelings they have for one another, they become immersed in a love so robust they can hardly function. Taryn seeking to modify the life shes been given, has stooped to an all time low to get money. Stopping at nothing to provide for Taryn-Lee, Demoto accepts a job that may tear them apart. In the back of his mind, he knows the things hes doing may build a rift between the two, but hes willing to take that loss. Being raised as a provider and protector, his natural instincts surfaces at all the right times. With the help of Demoto and her best friend Kia, Taryn exhausts all of her options to maintain her individuality while surrendering herself to this unyielding love. Albeit everything isn't always perfect, you have to be a man of your word. Demoto and Taryn spend their young lives, proving to one another love is more than just a word. It's an action. Never give up on love, notably when it's filled with honest authenticity.
